Preservation of Milk.

The following method is recommended for the preservation of milk. either at sea or in warm climates:

Provide pint or quart bottles, which must be perfectly clean, sweet, and dry; draw the milk from the cow into the bottles, and as they are filled, immediately cork them well up, and fasten the cork with pack-thread or wire; then spread a little straw on the bottom of a beiler, on which place the bottles with straw between them, until the boiler contains a sufficient quantity. Fill it up with cold water; heat the water, and as soon as it begins to boil, draw the fire, and let the whole cool gradually. When quite cold, take out the bottles, and pack them with straw or saw-dust in hampers, and stov them in a cool place. Some years since, there was a Swedish or Danish vessel at Liverpool having milk on board, preserved in this manner. It had been carried twice to the West Indies, and back to Denmark, and been above eighteen months in the bottles; nevertheless, it was as sweet as when taken from the cow.

On this subject, the editor of the "Chemist," in a late number, says:

"We lately tasted, at the Royal Institution, milk preserved by Mr. Mabbrun's process, and which had been presented by the Abbe Moigne to Mr. Barlow, who alluded to it in his lecture on preserved meats and vegetables. This milk was one year old, and was as sweet as when first drawn. A considerable quantity of cream had collected in the necks of the bottles."

Scarcity of Horses in Europe.

A correspondent of the New York Spirit of the Times, writing recently from London, thus speaks of the horse market in that city: "Ladies' surprise you. In thirteen days' search 'illegant." I could not find a decent pair for sale at any price. If this war lasts another year, the Europeans will be importing horses from America, and it would be well worth the attention of eyes glaring at him. our farmers and breeders to raise large horses, fit to draw a heavy carriage, or carry a heavy man. Good saddlehorses for gentlemen, are still to be found by paying for them; a first rate one stands you $300. A Utica (N. Y.) paper states that a gentleman is now in that city, purchasing carriage and saddle-horses for the Paris market. We are not sure but it would be wisdom on the part of our country friends to enter largely upon the propagation of horses and mules, for the European war is by no means at an end, and the demand for these animals must necessarily increase in that country for some time to come."

Wind Sucking.

This detestable habit in horses may be cured, says a contributor to the Ohio Cultivator, by the following pro-

Wind sucking is a habit, (like chewing tobacco) much easier acquired than forgotten. It can only be practised, however, under favorable circumstances—that is, when there is some object on which the horse can rest his teeth, located about as high as his breast-such as a common manger, for instance. The best remedy, therefore, is to place the feeding trough as low as the ground or floor of the stable, and the havrack as high as the horse can reach; and see that there is no object of an intermediate height for him to rest his teeth upon to suck wind. Care must also be taken that when out of "Augh," says Biddy, "I'm faintin' the stable, he is not allowed to stand wid the power uv 'im.
